or  After-dialogue Exercise and  Talk about it. for students.

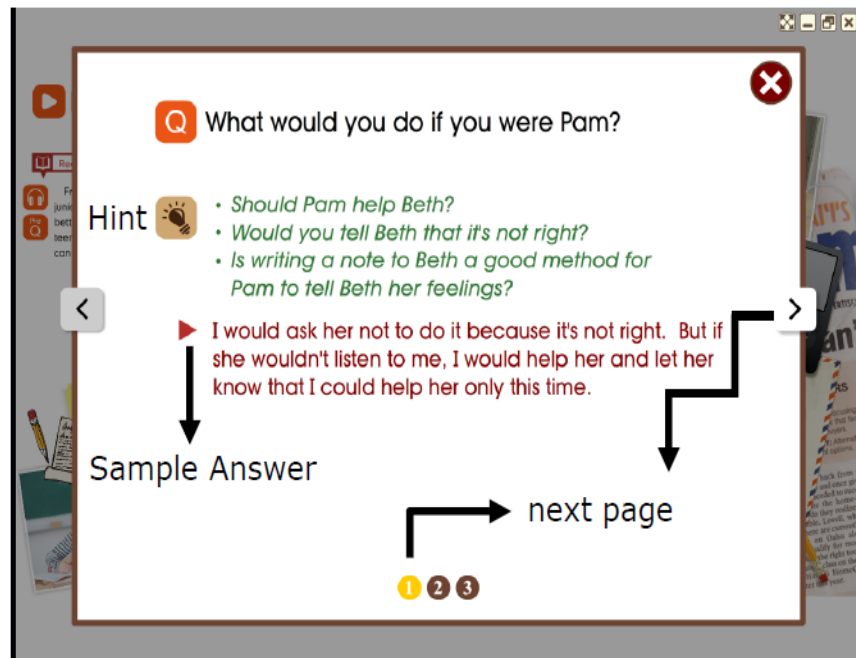

"Extension" is used to delve further into the topic.

The screenshot shows a digital reading resource interface. At the top, there are navigation icons for play, stop, back, forward, and search. Below these is a section titled "Teenage Friendship" with a "Reading" icon. The main content area is divided into two sections: "In the book" and "Extension". The "In the book" section contains a list of tasks: "Choose the best answer." and "Talk about it.". The "Extension" section is currently empty. The background features a photograph of two boys playing video games, a smartphone, and a letter from Neil Smith. The letter text reads: "Dear Rachel Bliss, My buddy, Victor, and I have been playing video games together since we were elementary school students. I always thought that having a buddy like Victor was the best thing that ever happened to me. But recently I have changed my mind. Victor has been smoking for months and especially when I am around. My parents get angry when they smell the cigarette smoke on me. They have been asking questions every time I get back from this place. I even got grounded today. Should I stop being friends with Victor? Neil Smith".

Talk about it.:

Below these is a section titled "Talk about it." with a "Question" icon. The main content area is divided into three sections: "Question", "Hint", and "Sample Answer". The "Question" section contains the text: "What would you do if you were Pam?". The "Hint" section contains a list of hints: "Should Pam help Beth?", "Would you tell Beth that it's not right?", and "Is writing a note to Beth a good method for Pam to tell Beth her feelings?". The "Sample Answer" section contains the text: "I would ask her not to do it because it's not right. But if she wouldn't listen to me, I would help her and let her know that I could help her only this time." Below the "Sample Answer" section is a "next page" button with a right arrow and the numbers 1, 2, 3. The background features a photograph of a girl reading a book, a smartphone, and a letter from Pam Jackson. The letter text reads: "Dear Rachel Bliss, My buddy, Victor, and I have been playing video games together since we were elementary school students.
